PRETTY WEDDING TAKES PLACE AT HIGH NOON TODAY

A very pretty wedding was held at high noon today when at the wedding hall of the Hotel de Ville, the bride of Mr. Arthur Greenwell, of San Francisco, was united to the groom, Mr. William Greenwell, of San Francisco.

The church was simply but effectively decorated with white chrysanthemums. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Williams in the presence of the relatives and intimate friends of the young couple.

The bride was attended by Miss Esther Kopke and Miss Mary Von Holt as bridesmaids and Mr. Macfarlane of Kona as best man. The ushers were Mr. Phillips and Mr. Carothers. The bride, who entered the church wearing a gown of white satin, was escorted by the groom, who wore a tuxedo with silver and pearl beads. Her face was veiled with orange blossoms.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Greenwell are well known in the islands having lived here the greater part of their lives. Mr. Greenwell is from Kona and the young people will eventually make their home there.

After the wedding the bride and groom, escorted by the bridesmaids and ushers, went to the hotel where a wedding breakfast was served. Later they went to the hotel where they will spend their honeymoon.

BOYD AGAIN FISH INSPECTOR

"A few of extinct volcanoes," to quote a famous saying of Gladstone in reply to a member of a dying cabinet, was suggested by a meeting of the board of supervisors this afternoon for the sole survivor of the recent election, McCallan, was absent. James H. Boyd, however, resumed his activity as a fish inspector—the office he resigned to run for re-election—as a result of the meeting. His application for reappointment was endorsed by City Physician Wayson and unanimously granted.

Later made the interesting statement that the long delayed new instruments for the band would be here the middle of the month.

Murray stated that two new fire engines, one of them for Kaimuki, would arrive on the 20th inst. An inquiry about the progress being made by the improvement club up there, in obtaining a site from the government for a station, was answered by Arnold with the information that the plan had been lost.

Curiously, a similar loss of an important document was reported by Low. This was in reference to an inquiry of the board by H. K. Bishop, chairman of the harbor commission, as to when the building of the road to the proposed Waikane wharf would begin, "so that tenders might be called for on the wharf."

"Bishop is a new man," said Low, "and he is asking questions the same as others have done. We are all ready to go ahead with the road, but the harbor commission is waiting for soundings before starting work on the wharf. I tossed them a chart which they have lost, and I have written to Washington for a new copy of the chart, which will be here in about a week. All these things were explained to Marston Campbell, the former chairman. There is no use of our building a road until they start on the wharf."

The matter was referred to the road committee.

I. W. W. Meeting. An application was received from the Industrial Workers of the World, signed by their organizer, Albert V. Roe, 32 Pauahi street, for permission to use Asia Park on Sunday evening for a public meeting. The latter confessed ignorance regarding the existence of an ordinance or regulation governing such things.

Murray said it depended on what kind of a meeting it was going to be. There was very little time to consult the attorney's department, no representative of which was present. On his motion to refer the matter to the police committee being carried, Murray said the clerk should inform the I. W. W. that they could not expect an answer before Sunday morning. GEN. HOMER LEA DIED SUDDENLY

Of the death of Gen. Homer Lea, who was known to a number of people in Honolulu, the San Francisco Chronicle says:

LOS ANGELES, November 1.—General Homer Lea, the American citizen who acted as adviser to the leaders of the late Chinese rebellion, died at his residence, 125 Wadsworth avenue, Ocean Park, at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon.

General Lea had been suffering from paralysis for months. He returned to his home from China as soon as it was seen the Manchou dynasty had been overthrown, and at this time it was reported he had suffered a third stroke of paralysis and would not live. However, his strength gradually returned and several weeks ago his physicians were hopeful that the General's ailment had been conquered.

General Lea was 45 years of age and had devoted practically his whole life to a study of China and its troubles. He is survived by his widow.

Homer Lea, a descendant of the same family which gave the South its famous General, while still a student at Stanford University began to turn his attention to matters military, making a specialty of the study of Chinese. When prevented by sickness from graduating, Lea suddenly left California for China. There he soon was in the councils of the highest men of the Empire. For his services he was commissioned Lieutenant-General and given jewels bearing the Emperor's medallion. Later he was one of the first to be associated with Dr. Sun Yat Sen, and was one of his advisers during the recent successful revolution in China.

General Lea is the author of several books dealing with the Orient, chief among them being "The Valor of Ignorance," which deals with the schemes of the Japanese to capture California and "The Vermillion Point," a story of the Chinese and Christian missionaries.
